Have you ever tried to download streaming video and audio files from Internet without any success? If so, we are here to help you. HiDownload Platinum enables you to grab video and audio streams from quite a number of websites and to save them to specified directories. As a matter of fact, the program gives you the possibility to grab videos such as Real Video, Windows Media, Apple QuickTime and MP3; audio files such as iTunes, Real Audio, MP3, AC3, and more. You can even extract HTML streams from websites using the built-in web crawler. The utility is able to grab streams from FTP and HTTP protocols, as well as to specify the downloading directories. In addition, the tool offers support for setting the default protocol, as well as for letting you start or stop the downloading process. You can manage the list of video and audio files that were downloaded so far, as well as sort them alphabetically, specify the file format and file extension to save them. HiDownload Platinum also includes a built-in podcast manager for automatically downloading audio podcasts. The tool has got a clean and intuitive layout that makes it possible to add a valid URL and select the directory for the saved items. Conversion of grabbed streams to a number of formats is enabled. You can even include the file format into the title of the files. What's more, the conversion process can be initiated while you are downloading the video or audio stream. The program works with Internet Explorer and a number of RSS sources for downloading episodes. You can specify the date and time information into the file names. In addition, you can configure the FTP settings, enable integration with Internet Explorer, and set the maximum number of downloading threads. You can limit the maximum number of threads used by the application. Moreover, HiDownload Platinum enables you to select the Internet media protocols (RTSP, HTTP, MMS) and RealMedia ones (RTSP, HTTP, PNM). The airwaves are full of radio signals. Yet at a given moment, people's ears only get to hear a certain amount of the stream broadcast on the radio. This is where the airwaves application comes into play. With the airwaves application, users are able to listen to several different radio channels. It also offers the possibility to build up a playlist of the heard tracks. Playlists are created using XP's built-in playlist creator. After a song has been selected for a playlist, it is added to the playlist to be listened to in succession. You can start a stream by pressing the play button at any time, or you can use the segmented browsing system to navigate the audio stream. The airwaves application also makes it easy for you to create and edit playlists. The tool is not a full-fledged Windows-based program like iTunes or WinAmp, but a Windows CE tool. Due to this, it's rather slow, sometimes crash and you can't copy or cut the audio files in it. If you want a tool with high-quality sound, then download Media Explorer instead. Features: The airwaves application offers several advanced features that make it easy to build playlists and download audio streams. To download online streams, all you need to do is select the protocol (RTSP, HTTP, MMS) and enter the stream's details. The program offers a synchronous option that lets you seamlessly join two or more streams. This means that you will be able to skip around the playlist and download the next song in the same stream. To change the song being played in the airwaves application, just drag and drop a song's file from your file manager, or just click on the volume icon in the taskbar. The airwaves application includes a high-quality editor that lets you trim, copy and mix music files. The editor also gives you access to a control panel for the playlist, playback settings, and MP3 conversion. To convert files, just right-click on them and choose the save option to save them as MP3, AVI, or WMV files. The airwaves application is packed with advanced features, but it's rather slow. If you want a tool with high-quality sound, then download Media Explorer instead. Browser-based: The application requires you to download a.exe file to your computer, then run it as a separate application from your file browser
