Last week, Google unveiled that it was part of an exclusive club of companies that employs more than one million people, including Facebook, Apple, and Microsoft. Today, Google added another company to the list with a blog post announcing the hiring of 50,000 people for product development roles. Yes, 50,000! The news comes as Google releases a stream of new products, including the Nexus 7 tablet and an upgraded version of the Google Play store.Q: removing items from collection View Controller A by pressing a button on collection View Controller B i currently have an app which has two collection views the first view is a list of videos the second view is a list of songs that are used to play the videos. i currently have a button which takes you to a ViewController (B) where the contents of view controller B are displayed on top of view controller A. i want to remove items from view controller A when view controller B is pressed. this is the code i have so far View controller A (Videos) var videoArray = Video var videoIndex = Int() override func viewDidLoad() { super.viewDidLoad() videoArray = Video.allVideos() videoIndex = Int() collectionView2.collectionViewLayout.invalidateLayout()
