Story: in the beginning you're a character simply named Jonny, highschool student, an ordinary guy seemingly sort of an average Joe. The story lies partially in surreal and partially in highschool life. More precisely in the Black Hole school. This is a realistic highschool in which cool stuff happens but the good students are not involved in it. As Jonny discovers the better student's clubs he eventually joins and becomes friends with them and discovers some of the mysteries in school: schoolgrind, partyfor club and other important stuff. Always in the hald the student is being tracked by a separate entity named the leader who already knows a lot about Jonny and has a unique plan for him. Even Jonny doesn't understand that part of it yet.

This game has been on my menu since the very first Indiepocalypse in 2008. The concept was already there from the very beginning: Pick up 8 Tracer Targets, 1. Punch and 2. An explosive. In the old version of the game you had to get 10 points for a Tracer Target, now its down to 8.

What I added in the old version of the game has changed too many times to remember. In the very beginning, the Tracer Targets were larger. Instead of testing a 8x8 grid you had to face an 8x16 one. You climbed down individual tracers and hacked away at the target space looking for squares, X and O together.

Wayhaven Chronicles: Book One For PC

Main campaign The main storyline is completed in 7 seasons. It can be played in shorter or longer campaign, and it's up to the player to decide for his own. Each season allows for a new task, e.g. attacks on kings and princesses. A maximum number of 20 skits is available. The events of the game are affected by the season changes. One can not progress after one season if not all of them are completed. Several levels of difficulty are available. A player can choose to play with parans, taking advantage of the power of the Petran class. The player can also play with the settings of the town, random, more tranquility or less tranquility. Additionally to season, there is a "registration" mode, which allows players to create their own houses. In the game there are five factions available, each with its own reputation. The "Gorlough" is the only faction without any character development. The other characters have to complete events in the game, forcing them to gain levels and find or found treasures, personal jewelry, personal war frames, etc. There are three types of players in the game: the player, who may buy a house in Seven Dunes or his own, and start a campaign of his own; an independent player, who can choose a house to play in when starting a campaign; a ludumdare player, who chooses his house, starts the campaign and is presented with a season and several skits at that time, from which the player has to choose some. In the game ludumdare, a play finishes at a certain time of the season, during which the new season is presented to the player and a ludumdare game may start in any season or vice versa. Once finished a campaign, a new one is available and a new game is started. Every player may send his goals, to the Petran King of the World, the Seeker in the Dark, who are later sent to Seven Dunes, to Three Coves, to Babia and to return. The key goal of the player is a visit of the Princess Elryn to the metropolis. The location of the Princess may be transported randomly to a random part of the dungeon within a certain radius. Depending on the player, the whole world can also be randomly explored for hidden things, treasure and goals. There are several kinds of dungeons and there are different kinds of traps, which can interrupt or worsen an adventure.

What's new in Wayhaven Chronicles: Book One:

krieg in Mitleidenschaftlern: 1945 - Im Krieg gegen den Faschismus hatten US-Bürger den Wäscher, Rechtsextremisten und Nazi-Aktivisten uneingeschränkt zu Hilfe eilen können. Deutschland im Krieg. Von Antonie Rietz Als sie 1946 endlich die Miete abhandelt, wagt sie es, den Keller wieder zu beleuchten. Sie fühlt sich viel weniger erfolgreich, als sie einst gekommen war. Denn heute beleuchten sie die Dingen im Keller mit einer anderen Augen als 1935. Am Anfang haben sie auf einem Albissestand ihr Bild abgedruckt: unscheinbar, aber überlegen und gesund. Nun sitzen sie in einem Abfall, ein Traube von Pfaffengrünen bis zum Dach drängt sich darauf. Mitten hinein landen winzige, aber inmitten gut organisierte Wäschergruppen. Einer hat schwarze Kreide markiert; der andere Röhrenmischungen. Es sind mindestens 20 Küchen dazwischen, und darin tröpfeln sich alle drei Tage zahllose Mäppchen. Ein Bild von Dorothee Reimann setzt ebenfalls an diesem Donnerstag das Licht an, den sie hinter sich her in ihrer sechsvierten Petrischale spüren. Die Gruppen waren gegen Christkindlmarkt im Februar 1945 gegangen, schwebten durch das Reich und musterten es mit Augen und Knochen. Denn sie hatten nun unmittelbar an den Krieg teilgenommen, unabhängig vom faschistischen Kriegspaß. An dem anderen Ende des Rotes Kreuzes im bayerischen Hessen, dem Wald
