While Photoshop Elements is a good option to learn how to edit images in a sensible way, it's not recommended for professional or advanced users. Photoshop is the complete tool. More beginners and professionals are using the Apple iPads instead of expensive, heavy and bulky laptops and desktop computers. It's fun and convenient. It's light, easy to use and it's just as fast as a computer. But what are the various apps that we use daily on the iPad to design web-pages, edit images, write blogs or documents? iOS Apps for Photoshop Serif Draw is an iPad app that's supposed to work like Photoshop. But its similarities aren't as great as Photoshop, and it lacks many of the features. It's cheaper, but still, Photoshop is the best and most powerful alternative to Photoshop Elements for professionals. It's available at a very low price, and it's one of the best versions of Photoshop available. What the Apps do? Digital cameras in the market are excellent, but not everyone who has one owns a printer that prints the resulting images. The image files are very large and print them in a high quality. If you don't have a printer, you will need a means to print these files. A number of features are available to edit the image and make it look better. On iOS, you can use the Adobe PhotoShop app. PhotoShop offers these features: The following 2 apps are meant to make your editing experience better. It's a companion to the Photoshop app. What the Apps do? The features of these apps are pretty much the same. You can make adjustments to the color, saturation or create or remove unwanted objects. But these apps are better suited to a casual user than Photoshop. On your iPhone and iPad, you can open the files and upload them to your social networking apps and services for sharing. The filters allow you to apply filters to get a more professional look. The advanced functions allow you to edit the photos as if you're using a separate Photoshop software. Conclusion There are a number of alternatives to Photoshop, and any one of them can meet your requirements. The best Photoshop alternative is Adobe Photoshop and Photoshop Elements. The price is relatively cheaper and easy to use. However, Photoshop is fully customizable and provides additional features which could be used 05a79cecff

Q: How to select the unique nodes under a root node from XML in LINQ Suppose we have a XML something like: 2 Item1 Item2 where it has following Root, BranchID and Items nodes. I want to return the items with unique BranchIDs in a list. I have written the following code: XDocument doc = XDocument.Load(xmlData); var query = from a in doc.Descendants("BranchID").Select(b => b.ToString()) from b in doc.Descendants("Items").Select(a => a.Element("Item").ToString()) select new { BranchID = a, Items = b }; var list = query.ToList(); But I don't know how can I write the LINQ query to achieve the output: var list = {"2"; "2"} Instead of: var list = {"2"; "2"; "2"} A: Give this a try: var list = (from a in doc.Descendants("BranchID") select b.ToString()).Distinct(); You could also use: var list = (from a in doc.Descendants("BranchID") select b.ToString()).ToList(); [Application of halo pin of the clavicular bone for reconstruction of the clavicle fracture]. Factors responsible for giving birth at home: role of health professionals in rural India. Our purpose was to assess factors responsible for giving birth at home in a rural area in India. Of 3,690 infants who were born in the study area of Rohini, Kanpur, from February to November, 1988, 1,052 (29%) were delivered at home. In nearly one-third (31%) of cases, no obstetric provider was present at the time of delivery. Twenty-five percent of mothers and 49% of fathers had no formal education. In the majority of cases (71%), birthing mothers were assisted by a male relative. Reasons for home delivery included lack of health care providers (61% of mothers), fear of losing the newborn (18%), incomplete antenatal care (14%), malnutrition (10%), and delayed progress of labor (8%). Similarly, fear of losing the newborn (66%) was the primary reason cited for delivering at home by the fathers. Indications for home delivery included lack of local obstetric providers (63% of fathers), inadequate antenatal care (21%), and a general lack of knowledge about the benefits of prenatal care (21%). Few mothers (16%) gave birth at a health facility due to fear of losing the newborn. In rural India, home delivery is common, due in large part to inadequate numbers and/or lack of qualified health care providers. The caregivers' decision to give birth at home rather than at a health facility may be influenced by prior knowledge of the dangers of a home delivery and the socioeconomic conditions of the household. Interventions directed at improving antenatal care, the number of health care workers, awareness of the need for antenatal care, and the availability of trained male health care providers are needed to reduce the rate of home delivery.// -- mode:C++; tab-width:8; c-basic-offset:2; indent-tabs-mode:t -- // vim: ts=8 sw=2 smarttab /* * Ceph - scalable distributed file system * * Copyright (C) 2011 New Dream Network * * This is free software; you can redistribute it and/or * modify it under the terms of the GNU Lesser General Public * License version 2.1, as published by the Free Software * Foundation.
