Queen's Park, Hong Kong Queen's Park () is a former land and public park located in Central and Wan Chai Districts in Hong Kong. It is now a small public park. History The land was originally part of the British Hong Kong government farm (). The land was bought in 1864 by Robert Brown Aitken (1817–1874). The land was set up in 1868 as St Stephen's Gardens in honour of Queen Victoria's golden jubilee. In 1871, it was renamed as Queen's Park after the accession of Queen Victoria's consort, Prince Albert. Although it initially had a small area, it expanded in 1894 and 1899, and has stayed that way ever since. During the Hong Kong handover in 1997, the area was included within the core of the Central and Wan Chai New Towns, and was incorporated into the Central and Wan Chai District Councils. In 2000, the Queen's Park Public Space was established. In 2002, the Queen's Park Swimming Pool, which had been closed for maintenance, was opened again for public use. Features Queen's Park features four major gardens. The Queen
